ARTISTIC DECORATIONS

The business district of Nevada City has a gala appearance today with bunting, flags and evergreen trees everywhere.

Francis Finnegan, general chairman, the Chamber of Commerce, E. J. N. Ott, Fred E. Conner, William Rector and many other public spirited citizens in preparing the interesting features in the parade and for the decorating of the city in general, are receiving the congratulations of the community on the completion of all their plans.

The court house is resplendent in prettily draped bunting with a large flag in the center of the cornice drape.

Hartungs, Kopps, Preston's, New York Hotel, Shamrock Cafe, City Hall, Eddie Leongs Dickerman's and Harris' Drug Stores, J. J. Jacksons, Fashion Shoppe, Bosworth's Furniture store, Montana Cafe, Ainsworth Barber shop, Plaza Garage, Schreiber's Cafe and Penrose Grocery are all resplendent in the national colors.

Free parking space has been obtained for the Fourth in the Pacific Gas & Electric lot on Coyote street, and in the vacant property belonging to the Angiolini estate at the foot of Main street, known as the burnt district... Cars may be parked in those places under direction of the Fourth of July Committee.

Comrade Sitton, 86 years old, veteran of the Civil War, residing in Birchville, will be a guest of the Fourth of July Committee of this city, during the Fourth. DENTIST OF OLD TIMES WAS GOOD AT ADVERTISING

In 1860 a certain dentist, riding circuit as dentists did in those days along with preachers, used to come to Nevada City for a season of teeth pulling. Among other means of advertising his services he used an elaborate handbill showing a photigraph of himself mounted on his mule. Beneath it was this story of his services:

"Teeth hauled with great pains or kicked out by mules with the greatest alacrity. Jaws broken and "set" free of charge. Cheek furnished at short notice, guaranteed to suit. I am pleased to announce that my with howling women, squalling young path has been strewn on both sides ones blood, misery and rotten teeth for 40 years. You may ask why I am so willing to continue this nefarious business. The only incentive is money and for a small amount I will manipulate your molars and eradicate your incisors and place you so near the bottomless pit that you can smell the brimstone and cry out, "this is hell."

"What I lack in skill, I make up in "gall" by charging a good fee for my distinguished professional services.

"There is a woman in Boise that is so fastidious that she kneads bread with her gloves on. John Lamb, of the Nugget, needs bread with his coat on. Payne, of the Bulletin needs bread with his shirt on. Parker, of Grangeville, needs bread with his breeches on. Adam Albach, of the Sun needs bread with his boots on, and if you fellows don't hurry up and get those teeth pulled I'll be needing bread without a d—thing on.

"I always skip when the women gather at my office and sing that favorite song so familiar to all dentists:

"Take back those teeth you made for me,
I'll fling them in your face
And hang them in your office—
As a badge of your disgrace.
You swore those crowns were solid gold.
You're false like other men.
They're turning back already—
Never speak to me again!

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR WILL ATTEND S. F. CONCLAVE

The 39th triennial conclave of Knights Templar is being held in San Francisco on July 7 and 8. A noted feature will be a "Cross of Salem" composed of 2,000 Knights Templar who will march in review.

About twenty-five Nevada county members plan to go to Sacramento in a body. They will take a special train bearing Northern California Templars to the conclave.

Nevada lodge is to hold a meeting Thursday evening at which time delegates will be choen.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Guenther, of Los Angeles, are expected to spend the Fourth with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Guenther.

Editor, Nugget:—

Girl Reserves from the bay region and from Sacramento are finding a Paradise on the edge of Lake Vera in their first summer of camping in this region. The setting is perfect and activities such as hiking, horseback riding, swimming, boating, dancing, hand-crafts, dramatics and everything else that girls like are being enjoyed enthusiastically.

There have been two weeks of splendid fun and now that this set of the grand banquet and forty-niner if campers have left us we must tell ball that was given for their farewell. Never before has there been a more splendid town hall opening since Gold Rush days nor a better assorted and glamorous crowd to celebrate. The new bar was opened and throughout the evening the dusty but happy folk quenched their thirst in bubbling if non-alcoholic liquid refreshments. It was a Saturday night to be long remembered.

On Sunday evening Vespers were held in our Green Cathedral in the woods. The litany of thanks was written by the girls themselves about the things they cared for most in camp and a choir of girls voices added t othe loveliness of the occasion.

On Friday, groups of campers went into Nevada City and enjoyed seeing places of historic interest. They are grateful to Mrs. Belle Douglas and to the Chamber of Commerce for helping them to know where to go. Mrs. Douglass was a guest of our camp on Thursday evening and entertained us with tales of the early days about here.

Going still further back in our memories of the happenings of the week, we remember Girls' Day, when the girls took over the responsibilities of the adult counsellors and the latter assumed a meek and obedient role (or are we wrong) as mere girl campers.

We remember too the day of arrival when we were refreshed by the city free smell of pines and by the sparkling waters of Lake Vera only to find that for precautionary reasons we were not to be allowed to swim for three days after our arrival. But in the last ten days we have made up for it and had swims in the morning and afternoon and bathing and canoeing in between.

We are enjoying having a local resident among our staff of councel lors in the person of Miss Florence Smart. She has been a help in interpreting and giving us our sense if direction in these parts but even she couldn't explain why it had to rain on us in our beds beneath the apple trees. We would appreciate it if the Chamber of Commerce could arrange to have clear weather until after July 23rd.

Yours until further news happens,

Sugar Loaf May Soon Have Road to Summit

As evidence of his faith in the present and future prosperity of Nevada City, and his keen insight into the lack of housing and building sites in this community, J. C. Ayers, of the Excelsior Water Company, has ordered a spiral road surveyed to the top of Sugar Loaf Mountain, one of the holdings of the Excelsior Water Company with a view to cutting that promentory up into villa building sites.

Edw. C. Uren is in charge of the survey and states that the road will be on an easy 8 per cent grade to the top.

No indication of when the work of grading the road will begin has been given. Water is readily obtainable from the ditch on the north side of the hill but would probably have to be pumped to the top.

No peak in the entire country around, with the exception of Banner Mountain, has a wider outlook than that obtained from the top of Sugar Loaf. From its summit on a clear day, a splendid view of the Sacramento Valley, the Coast Range, the Sutter Buttes and, to the east, a half dozen peaks of the Sierras, may be obtained.

VETERAN PROSPECTOR SELLS ALLEGHANY CLAIMS FOR $10,000

Jimmy Sweeney, veteran prospector of Alleghany, has sold his mine claims lying between the Plumbago and Oriental mining properties near Alleghany for the round sum of $10,000. According to Sweeney a certified check was deposited in the Bank of America last week consummating the deal. For the past ten or twelve years Sweeney has been prospecting in and around Alleghany. The buyer is H. A. Stanton, of Los Angeles.

WAGE INCREASE FOR FOUR MORE MINE COMPANIES

Four more mining companies in the Nevada City-Grass Valley area fell in line with wage increases of 50 cents per man per day, with the announcement by Otto E. Schiffner, of the Lava Cap; A. M. Hoge of the Hoge Development Company; L. S. Wincapaw, of the Golden Center, and Alta Hill properties and E. Jacobs of the Empress mine.

About 85 men are employed at the Lava Cap; 20 at the Hoge; 85 at the Golden Center, and Alta Hill; and 50 at the Empress, making a wage increase for a total of 220 men employed in all the properties.

Every major mining company of the Grass Valley-Nevada City district has now increased their wage scale approximately 10 per cent.

Stanley Woolcock, of Grass Valley is the registration and replacement officer for the county. The supervisors took the matter under advisement. They will meet again next Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo Chiconi, who were married last week, have returned from a short honeymoon. Mr. Chiconi is a Nevada City merchant and better known to his many friends as "Chick".

JUDGE SCORES COUNTY BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

The County Board of Supervisors meeting this morning received the following letter, self-explanatory, from Judge Acton M. Cleveland of Camptonville:

Camptonville, Calif.
June 30, 1934.

Honorable Board of Supervisors,
Nevada City, California.

Gentlemen:

Last week a motorist from Oakland had the misfortune of going over the grade near here, and badly injuring himself. The state highway crew brought him in, and he asked me to phone to his relatives at Oakland. I did this, and they requested me to take him to the nearest and cheapest hospital for medical attention, and although they were poor people, they would take care of the expense as best they could.

In accordance with their request, I ordered an ambulance and sent him to your county hospital, but he was refused admission on the grounds that he was hurt in Yuba county, and they would not take him in. He was taken to the Jones hospital and later taken to Marysville.

It is generally conceded that a hospital particularly a county hospital is a humanitarian institution, administering relief to the distressed, and when one is badly hurt, it does not seem hardly right that he be turned away without any form of treatment.

I am calling his to your attention because I feel that your institution is not consistent in putting fourth the statement that they would not take the man because he was hurt in Yuba county. On the other hand, your hospital accepted, and administered to a legal resident of Yuba county, several times, I am informed, Earl Ricketts, who recently hanged himself in your hospital, and I presume that Nevada county buried him. He lived five miles from this place for several years.

Yuba county can take care of any of its residents, either injured or sick, but this man did not belong here, he was merely hurt on the Yuba Pass highway, and the idea was to get him to immediate relief, and Nevada City being only 20 miles against 50 to Marysville, upon request of his people, who were willing to pay, he was sent there.

I trust that you gentlemen will give this matter some thought, and in the case of injury, that at least a little first aid be administered before the injured man is turned away.

Very truly yours,
ACTON M. CLEVELAND.

Andy Larson, brother of Mrs. George Lysterup, has just returned from Provo, Utah, with his bride. Mr. Larson is engaged as a miner in one of the local mines and brings his bride here to reside.

BORN: To Mr. and Mrs. Justin Hurst, a daughter, at the Nevada City Sanitarium on June 30, 1934.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Murchie, of Auburn, are expected to spend the Fourth in Nevada City with their parents.

DO YOU SUFFER FROM NEURITIS?

American and European Scientists Agree That Mineral Water Is Beneficial

TRY THIS NATURAL WAY

People spend hundreds of millions of dollars every year going to the great mineral water health resorts of Europe and America.

Many of these people have to travel thousands of miles. Many of them were suffering untold pain from "rheumatic" aches, from arthritis, from neuritis, from gout. Others suffered from certain stomach ailments or excess acid or sluggishness or a general rundown condition.

The scientific and medical records of Europe and America show that a very large percentage of these people gained blessed relief and help by these natural mineral water treatments.

Today, however, you do not have to travel long distances to partake of the healthful qualities of fine natural mineral water. You do not even have to pay the excessive cost of having it shipped to you in quart or gallon containers. For Crazy Water Crystals bring to your own home the precious minerals of one of the world's fine mineral waters in crystal form at a great saving in expense.

To Crazy Water Crystals absolutely nothing is added. All you do is add Crazy Water Crystals to your drinking water and you have a great mineral water which has benefited millions.

If you, or any of your friends, suffer from "rheumatic" aches or pains we suggest you investigate Crazy Water Crystals at once. Just ask any of the millions of people who have given them a full and fair trial and you will realize how beneficial they have been to so many sufferers.

The standard size box costs only $1.50 and makes enough mineral water for several weeks treatment. Crazy Water Co., Mineral Wells, Texas.

Congress Quits, Having Done Most Things the President Asked—Steel Strike Postponed—Roosevelt's Daughter in Nevada, Presumably for Divorce.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© by Western Newspaper Union.

AFTER several days of hectic work, pushing through the last measures labeled "must" by the administration and a host of other bills demanded by various members, the Seventy-third congress closed its second session. The measures passed during this session include some of the basic laws of the New Deal and considerable elaboration and modification of laws passed last year in addition to the regular appropriation bills and a normal amount of necessary routine legislation.

As in the first session, President Roosevelt was in full control, though the legislators displayed a more critical attitude and a tendency to give proposed legislation closer scrutiny before giving it their approval. This could not be attributed to a lessening of the President's influence or of the confidence in him, but rather to the fact that the members of congress didn't wish longer to be labeled as "yes men." On the whole Mr. Roosevelt succeeded in getting what he asked and in preventing what he did not want.

Several measures that had the backing of the administration failed of passage. These included the oil bill, ardently desired by Secretary Ickes; the pure food and drug bill, which never came to a vote; the ratification of the St. Lawrence waterway treaty; and a series of amendments amplifying and clarifying the powers of the AAA.

In its closing hours the congress spent money like water, indulging in what Congressman Britten of Chicago called "an orgy of spending such as never has been known in the history of the world during peace times." The last of the major bills disposed of were:

The deficiency appropriation bill, allotting the President more than two billion three hundred million dollars for relief and other emergency purposes.

The one billion dollar housing bill to promote the revival of the building trades and of the durable goods industries.

The bill amending banking legislation.

The railway labor bill.

WILLIAM GREEN, president of the American Federation of Labor, succeeded where President Roosevelt, Administrator Johnson and all others had failed. He appeared before the delegates of the steel workers' unions at Pittsburgh and persuaded them at least to postpone their threatened strike. The plan which he offered, and which may lead to a permanent settlement of the controversy, in brief provides:

Earl J. Forbeck

Establishment of a three-man board by the President to adjudicate and mediate all violations of code on matters of discrimination against employees.

To insure the right of workers to organize, empowering the board to hold and supervise industrial elections for collective bargaining representatives.

All grievances or complaints would be referred to the board for final decision.

If acceptable to labor, capital, and the federal government, the strike would be called off permanently.

Leaders of the "rank and file" steel workers, including Earl J. Forbeck and other chiefs of local unions, were especially bitter in their attitude toward General Johnson, and were still eager for a strike, but they were outnumbered and the Green plan was adopted as a basis for further negotiations. The union leaders went to Washington for a final decision. They carried authority to call the strike if the peace plan were rejected by the government or the steel operators.

IN A formal letter, accompanied by a long explanation, the code authority of the cleaners and dyers has notified the President that it has withdrawn its consent to the code. The reason assigned for this action is that Administrator Johnson, acting by authority of the President, suspended the minimum price and other fair trade practice provisions of the code while leaving in effect all other provisions, including those establishing minimum wages and maximum hours of labor.

The cleaners and dyers say that with operating costs greatly increased by the labor provisions it is impossible to make a profit unless a minimum price is established and enforced.

In its appended explanation the code authority challenged the validity of this action by General Johnson, continuing:

"We cannot believe that you would knowingly countenance a reckless disregard of repeated promises and assurances given to authorized representatives of the trade by the administrator personally within two weeks of the date on which he played a major role in their breach."

The code was consented to, says the memorandum, "on the express understanding" that the minimum price and other trade practice provisions "were absolutely necessary if members of the trade were to comply with other provisions of the code, including the limitations on maximum hours and minimum wages of labor." The suspension of the minimum price provision is pronounced "a deprivation of the primary benefit of the code to members of the trade, leaving them only the burdens."

The memorandum states that 97 per cent of the 11,000 plant owners and 175,000 to 200,000 retail shops are able and willing to comply with the price and other trade practice provisions if there is "reasonable co-operation on the part of the government in enforcing compliance on the other 3 per cent. There is virtually complete compliance in 132 of the 312 districts."

"We are equally confident, however, that confidence in a program, no matter how meritorious, cannot long be maintained when its administration is intrusted to an agent who makes so little of the elementary requirements of good faith and who is oblivious to the hardship and suffering his conduct is causing to thousands of loyal and law abiding citizens of this country."

SECRETARY OF WAR DERN and President Roosevelt have received a unanimous report from a house investigating committee demanding that Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois be removed as chief of the army air corps "without delay." The report accused the general of "dishonesty," "gross misconduct," "inefficiency," "inaccuracy," "unreliability," "incompetency," and "mismanagement."

Gen. Foulois

After praising the "young men" who fly army planes under Foulois' direction, the report concluded:

"We find it necessary to report that we are most firmly convinced, from the evidence and records submitted, that before any substantial progress in the upbuilding of the morale and materiel of the army air corps can be attained, Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois must be relieved from his position as chief of the air corps."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT went up to New Haven, Conn., for the Yale commencement and was presented with the highest honor the university can bestow, the degree of doctor of laws. After the ceremony he attended a luncheon of alumni and took occasion to challenge the critics of his New Deal and especially those who make fun of the "brain trust."

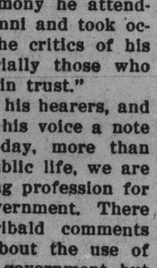
"It is true," he told his hearers, and there was obvious in his voice a note of defiance, "that today, more than ever before in our public life, we are calling on the teaching profession for assistance in our government. There have been certain ribald comments and some laughter about the use of brains in the national government, but it seems to me a pretty good practice.

"It is a practice that will continue," he added firmly. And the professors around him started the vigorous applause which followed.

Later on he evoked further applause when he said: "I couldn't tell you the party affiliations of the majority of people holding responsible positions in Washington, and it is a mighty good thing I cannot."

That evening Mr. Roosevelt boarded the presidential yacht Sequoia and proceeded slowly to New London, Conn., to witness the boat races between Harvard and Yale. His son, Franklin, Jr., was one of the Harvard freshman crew. After the regatta the President motored to the family home at Hyde Park, N. Y., to remain over the week end.

ANOTHER divorce in the Roosevelt family is impending. Mrs. Anna Dall, the daughter of the President, has taken up residence in Nevada with the evident though not yet declared purpose of seeking legal separation from her husband, Curtis Dall, New York broker. The news was no surprise to friends of the family. The Dalls have not been living together for a year, Anna and their two children, "Sistie" and "Buzzie" residing in the White House.



Mrs. Anna Dall

For the six months she must remain in Nevada Mrs. Dall has selected a log cabin on the shores of Lake Tahoe, some fifteen miles from the house where her brother, Elliott, lived a year ago, when he and the former Elizabeth Donner of Philadelphia were divorced.

COLLUSIVE bids on city supplies and contracts are ended by the recognition, by the NRA administration, that NRA code regulations are unworkable in dealings with municipal and other governmental agencies. An executive order has been issued exempting contractors, manufacturers and merchants from the most important of the code restrictions in all transactions with federal, state or city or other subdivisions of government. It was published after thousands of cities had protested against increases in operating costs occasioned by the NRA.

CHANCELLOR HITLER has been receiving some hard knocks recently. Vice Chancellor Franz von Papen delivered himself of a vigorous criticism of the more radical experiments of the Nazi regime, and its "excesses and arrogance." Alluding to the pagan revival, Von Papen said: "Germans must not exclude themselves from the society of Christian nations." The speech, delivered at Marburg, was kept out of the German press but the German people read it in Swiss papers, and then learned that President Paul von Hindenburg had sent Von Papen a telegram of congratulation.

Count Nadolny.

Immediately after this incident Count Rudolf Nadolny announced his resignation as German ambassador to Russia. This was the first defection from Nazi government ranks since Dr. Alfred Hugenberg resigned as minister of agriculture and economics in June, 1933. Nadolny's resignation is attributed to his failure to persuade Chancellor Hitler to accept Russia's proposal for a non-aggression pact. The count is a close personal friend of President von Hindenburg.

Late dispatches from Berlin say Hitler has rejected Von Papen's offer to resign and has made a temporary truce with him. Both of them arranged to confer with the President at Neudeck, but not at the same time.

JAPAN was obviously pleased recently when the American fleet was moved from the Pacific to the Atlantic, but it will not be so glad to hear that the fleet is to return to the Pacific about November 1, when all its maneuvers have been completed. Presumably there will be an attempt, in passing through the Panama canal, to break the 47-hour record made in the spring.

Secretary Swanson says the navy's construction program will be pushed ahead with $40,000,000 obtained from the public works administration. Six new submarines and fourteen destroyers will use up most of this sum. About $5,500,000 will be spent on airplanes.

TERRORISTS in Cuba, who have been stirring up continual trouble for the Mendieta administration, precipitated bloody warfare in Havana by making an unprovoked atack on a parade of 35,000 members of the ABC, the island's largest secret political society. The radicals, ambushed in cross streets, opened fire with machine guns, pistols, sawed-off shotguns and rifles, mowing down scores of the marchers and many bystanders. About a dozen were killed outright. The ABC members fought valiantly with their revolvers and with clubs and stones. Later the fighting spread throughout the city, the students taking sides with the terrorists.

Col. Fulgencio Batista, chief of staff, declared martial law in Havana as soldiers, sailors, and marines struggled to stem the rioting.

Only a few hours before this furious battle, President Mendieta narrowly escaped death at the hands of the terrorists. A bomb was exploded behind his chair during a luncheon at a naval base across the bay from Havana, and he was badly wounded in the legs and arms and severely shocked. Two naval officers were killed and ten others were wounded by the blast.

LADY ASTOR, the American-born member of the British parliament, has done a lot of bright things and some stupid ones. In the latter category comes her action in Plymouth at a ceremony in memory of Sir Francis Drake. She grabbed from a midshipman of the American battleship Wyoming a wine-filled goblet and threw the wine into the river, saying: "I cannot understand why men will leave home for this beastly stuff."

BEGINNING July 1, the air mail postage rate will be six cents an ounce, flat. The old rate was eight cents the first ounce and 13 cents for each additional ounce. The reduction was announced by the Post Office department.

HENRIK SHIPSTEAD won renomination in Minnesota as the Farmer-Labor candidate for the United States senate. He will be opposed at the polls by Congressman Einar Hoidale, Democrat, and N. J. Holmberg, Republican. The Farmer-Laborites also renominate Gov. Floyd B. Olson.

WILLIAM LANGER, governor of North Dakota, and four of his associates, were convicted in federal court at Bismarck, of conspiracy to defraud the United States government, the case involving the alleged collection of campaign funds. They faced possible terms of two years in a penitentiary, a $10,000 fine or both. The governor is a candidate for re-election and suspended his campaign to fight for a new trial.

"I do. But the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district will not go bust, and with the increased fertility and, consequently, the doubling in value of the lands and their increased earning power, this bank's security will be ample and the mortgages and deeds of trust will be paid. If not, they can be foreclosed and the bank can take over the lands, subject, of course, to the bond issue against them. And they can then be sold very readily. I have no apprehensions on that score and if you are trying to frighten me you are not making a very successful job of it."

Nate Tichenor pointed through the open door of the bank to a lot across the street where a gang of workmen were engaged erecting a one-story building of cream brick. "That lot and building are mine," Tichenor informed the banker lightly. "I'm going to start a bank there with a million dollars capital."

"You'll have to prove a genuine need for another bank and you'll have to prove that your bank has some sound hopes for success. And you cannot do that while the Bank of Valley Center continues to function as at present."

"Well, I'll be all set, ready to take over the wreck of your bank, Babson. I'm patient. I can wait."

As Tichenor walked out, Babson turned to Henry Rookby. "Henry, that fellow's so rattled he doesn't know what to do. He'd like to start an injunction suit against the district, but he's not at all certain he can win. Henry, he's actually erecting a bank building across the street, hoping to scare me into a compromise to save his face. Can you beat him?

"He's small change." Mr. Rookby replied disdainfully. "Forget him."

But Mr. Rookby's airy advice failed to bring the measure of comfort for which Babson yearned. Even his own assurances presently failed him. Nothing in life is more distressing than uncertainty, and the uncertainty as to whether Nate Tichenor and Lorry Kershaw would apply for an injunction restraining the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district from diverting water from Eden Valley creek was a profound uncertainty, indeed. Babson wondered whether Tichenor was really depressed over the situation, really disinclined to a fight in the courts.

That night Silas Babson went home with a violent headache. He did not sleep well, either, and the following night he was very weary, indeed. The third night he was still sleepless and then his old enemy insomnia claimed him and he had a nervous breakdown.

The Postmaster at Valley Center reported that Nate Tichenor must loathe the town with a great loathing, because not a single letter from Tichenor, his wife, or their employees was ever posted in Valley Center. And, as everybody knows, the pay of a country postmaster is predicated on the amount of business he does! A similar complaint came from the local telegraph agent and the local telephone agent. Nobody could ascertain, via these agencies, anything of Nate Tichenor's business and this was a genuine deprivation. Nor was a single dollar of Tichenor money expended in Valley Center for anything that could be purchased in Gold Run.

The irrigation district's engineer reported to Babson that before the first of April Lake Babson would be filled to the top of its flood-gates. Babson was jubilant. Under his urging, promulgated in the Forlorn Valley Citizen, thousands of acres of land had been prepared for alfalfa the preceding fall. They had been seeded just prior to the first rains, and succeeding rains at brief intervals had kept the new crops growing steadily and had deposited in the lands sufficient moisture to last until the spring rains ceased and it would be necessary to employ surface irrigation to develop the first crop about the first of June. Babson decided therefore, to open the Lake Babson headgates for the first time on May first and to make the occasion one of general rejoicing; the descent, for the first time upon Forlorn Valley of the life-giving waters of Eden Valley creek should be an epic event.

The prospect filled him with delight, thrilled him to an unwonted generosity. He owned rather a lovely farm on the western edge of the district, and through this far the main canal had been dug, with the laterals leading from it down a gentle slope to the east and taking advantage of every contour. There was a grove of Valparaiso live oaks growing on this farm close to the edge of the main canal and here Babson decided to hold a barbecue for his people.

A dramatic frenzy gradually seized him. May-day, immemorially dedicated to festivals, was to be his day of triumph, a day that should repay him for his years of labor, and self-sacrifice for the public weal. Of course, as president of the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district, his right to be the orator of the day could not be gainsaid and nobody tried to gainsay it. He dictated his speech to his secretary, edited it, revised it, labored lovingly over it, and when it was complete he memorized it and delivered it, with appropriate gestures, to Henry Rookby after the bank had closed for the day. Meanwhile he had had an electrical contrivance installed at the reservoir headgates, and a wire led eight miles down country to connect with a push-button on the speakers' stand at the barbecue grounds. He had the district's engineer figure approximately how long it would require the water to flow from the headgates to the grove, for he planned, at the moment of mounting the platform to press his push-button, which would raise the headgates at the reservoir and release the water. Then at a certain dramatic point in his oration the water would make its dramatic appearance. Henry Rookby was to discover its approach and interrupt Babson with shrill and appropriate cries of amazement and joy.

Babson had a motion-picture camera man from a news reel agency engaged to photograph the head of the vast brown flood as it rolled down the dry forty-foot main canal, bank-deep. He sent out engraved invitations to the great of the county and plastered the barns and fences of Forlorn Valley with notices of the great event and a cordial invitation to attend—everything free. At the last moment he forgot his early religious training and erected a dance platform. He decorated everything liberally with red, white and blue bunting and the American flag, and resurrected the striped trousers, Prince Albert coat, and top hat he had once been forced to purchase—or look ridiculous when acting as pall-bearer to a defunct congressman from his district.

He was so happy he elected to forget that Joe Brainerd had once punched him several times on the nose, and sent over to the office of the Register a detailed announcement of his plans, for he was ever one who loved publicity. Promptly Brainerd carried this news to Eden Valley, where Nate Tichenor's eyes glowed strangely. He set off immediately for the county seat.

The great day arrived, and as Babson mounted the speakers' platform and gazed out over the hundreds of happy faces before him—as the Gold Run Silver Cornet band broke into "Hail, the Conquering Hero Comes!" and three cheers and a vigorous tiger burst from the audience, Babson turned to Congressman Beatty, whose valiant work in Washington had aided to tap Eden Valley creek and secure permission to run the diversion canal through the public domain, and remarked that he was convinced at last that he had not lived in vain.

Bowing to the audience, he removed his shiny top hat and laid it on a small pine table before him. He gazed lovingly at the magic push-button, his hand reached lingeringly out to press it, all unseen by his auditors (happily, he had taken the precaution so to place his hat that the pressing of the button would not be observed) when a rude interruption occurred.

A commanding voice cried sharply, "Stop that, Babson!" and Babson stayed his hand to glance up angrily. Nate Tichenor stepped up on the platform; behind him came his wife and Rube Tenney, and a silence that was almost thunderous settled over the grove as it was observed that all three were wearing two six-shooters each. Straight to Babson's side Tichenor strode; he delivered upon the Babson shoulder a gentle accolade with a blue-backed, legal-looking document and then thrust it into Babson's hand, the while he said so all might hear:

"This is a temporary injunction from the judge of the Superior court of this county, restraining the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district, its officers, members, employees and agents, from diverting the waters of Eden Valley creek to Forlorn Valley, and ordering the district to show cause, within ten days, why this injunction should not be made permanent. I warn you, Silas Babson, that if you press that button you will be in contempt of court."

There was not a sound. For fully two minutes the three on the platform waited grimly, then Nate Tichenor said: "Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow you'll be broke." His wife put her arm through his and together they descended the two short steps to the audience, while Mr. Tenney, grinning evilly, trudged stolidly in the rear. Down through the center aisle they passed to an automobile waiting outside the grove; they entered and rolled away, as Silas Babson was reading aloud to his people the damnable legal document that had changed his hour of triumph into one of despair. With difficulty controlling his voice he announced:

"Mr. Tichenor has a habit of dramatizing himself, and while he has, of course, robbed this historic moment of certain high lights I had provided for your entertainment, still his rude and ungenerous interruption need cast no shadow o'er us. We are here to enjoy ourselves and we shall do so." And he proceeded to deliver his speech. Congressman Conrad Beatty followed him and assured his hearers that they had nothing to fear for the future—take his word for that. Henry Rookby, invaluable in desperate moments, had the band play whenever the speakers paused for breath or a drink of water, and little by little the gloom of Nate Tichenor's dramatic visitation was dispelled and the party took on most of the aspects of a genuine jollification.

In Nate Tichenor's latest move Silas Babson and his fellow directors read only a last-minute effort, inspired solely by malice, to embarrass the district with a lawsuit that would drag through the summer and thus for another year deprive the valley of water. To thwart this, therefore, it was imperative that the district employ an imposing array of legal talent immediately and have Tichenor's suit to obtain a permanent injunction go to trial without delay. Four days later both sides had finished with their witnesses, both legal batteries had fired their last broadsides, and his honor looked gravely over the top of his desk at the belligerents.

"Since this case went to trial," he announced, "the Supreme court of the state of California has rendered a unanimous decision in an appeal from a decision rendered by the Superior court in a case similar to this. Due to the recent decision of the Supreme court, an advance copy of which has only this morning reached me, I find myself in the embarrassing position of having to reverse my previous view as to the constitutionality of Paragraph 534 of the Code of Civil Procedure, upon which the defendant corporation has based its argument in the issue at trial.

"In general, the Supreme court of the state of California holds that there is no such thing as flood, storm or freshet waters in a stream, but merely a seasonal rise and fall of the stream and that all waters therein, not merely the so-called summer or normal flow, are riparian to the bed thereof, and may not be diverted from such riparian lands for the use and benefit of a non-riparian owner. The Supreme court holds that all of the waters of said river (which, of course, applies to all streams throughout the state) are an inalienable and vested right of the owners of the lands riparian thereto.

"This court has no alternative but to award to the plaintiff the permanent injunction prayed for, restraining forever the defendant public service corporation, Forlorn Valley Irrigation district, from diverting any of the waters of Eden Valley creek. This court also assesses the costs of this action to the defendants, as prayed for in the complaint, and it is so ordered. At a later date the court will issue a formal written decision, but the court can see no reason for refraining from rendering an informal decision at this time and referring the defendant corporation to its sole and inalienable right at law—the right to acquire the lands of the Bar H Land and Cattle company et al. through condemnation suit or purchase by private treaty. Court is dismissed!"

There was nothing else for Silas Babson to do save weep—and he did. He laid his tired head on the counsel table and sobbed as if his heart must break. "Don't take it so hard, Mr. Babson," his counsel continued. "You have one more arrow in your quiver. The district can still condemn Eden Valley and acquire its water rights."

"Of course it can." Nate Tichenor was speaking from the other side of the counsel table. "But Eden Valley's fertile acreage far exceeds that of Forlorn Valley, and it is infinitely more valuable. You cannot have Eden Valley for less than two million dollars and the lands in the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district are already mortgaged to the limit."

Babson, red-eyed, gazed at him with something of the malevolence of a trapped mink. "You've ruined Forlorn Valley," he quavered. "You realize that, don't you?"

"I haven't given any thought to Forlorn Valley," Nate replied coldly. "Just now I'm reveling in the joy that comes of the knowledge I have ruined you. All I have to do to save Forlorn Valley is to press a button.

"For God's sake, Mr. Tichenor, do it," Babson pleaded. "All these poor people—"

"Who refused to permit me to be kind to them and save them from ruin," Tichenor interrupted harshly. "All these poor people who followed their false leader blindly and stupidly, who refused to believe Lorry Kershaw and I had hearts in our breasts! All these poor people who hooted at me, cried me down, smashed my body, and smeared me with road oil and feathers! All these poor people who rejoiced in reviling my wife and me, in reciting our sorry family history!"

"Then," said Babson, aghast, "you intend to foreclose the deed of trust on Forlorn Valley?"

"The minute you default on the payment of the interest, Babson."

"And then—you'll—press the button?"

"Naturally. I'll have to—to make my investment sweet. Just now it's a wee bit sour."

Silas Babson gave vent to a moaning little cry, like a hurt animal; he slid softly out of his chair to the floor. He had fainted.

A group of farmers seated in the rear of the courtroom now got up quietly and stalked out. Tichenor followed them to the door and stood watching them. As if acting under the stimulus of a common purpose they walked to their shabby automobiles parked along the curb and drove out of town at a high rate of speed.

When Babson let himself in the side door of the Bank of Valley Center about four o'clock that afternoon Henry Rookby's white face peered out at him from the cashier's cage where Rookby was balancing his cash.

"We got to do something an' do it quick," Rookby quavered. "I've had a run on the bank since noon. What are we going to do tomorrow if this run continues, Mr. Babson. We haven't more than twenty thousand dollars in the vault now."

"Don't open the bank tomorrow if you see a crowd in front waiting. Paste a notice in the window that this bank has closed temporarily and will reopen as soon as I have returned from San Francisco with cash to meet all demands for withdrawals. Got to have an excuse to keep 'em quiet."

Boiler of Ill-Fated Tug Erie Belle Salvaged From Lake After Fifty Years

Vivid recollections of a summer day 50 years ago, when the captain of the tug Erie Belle vowed, with a mighty oath, to pull the schooner Carter off the rock-bound shore south of Kincardine, or blow up his tug in the attempt, were awakened when the boiler of the ill-fated Erie Belle was hauled from the lake bottom to the shore, says a Kincardine (Ontario) writer in the Detroit Free Press.

Charles Macpherson, who undertook the prodigious task of drawing the boiler from its resting place, proposes to have it placed in Victoria Park as a relic of the days when Kincardine was a noted lake port. Of course, the boiler, rusted and corroded, will be painted and on it will be placed a plaque telling the story of the ill-fated tug, proving the old adage that truth is stranger than fiction.

Of half-inch steel, 10 feet in height, with copper flues, only one of which remains to show that the boiler was once a part of the Erie Belle, made difficult the task of drawing the steel hulk from its resting place in two feet of mud and rock, 150 yards from the shore. Several abortive attempts were made before the boiler could be dragged to shore. As if reluctant to leave the scene of the catastrophe in which seven men went to their deaths, the boiler snapped chains which were placed around it.

Just half a century ago the Erie Belle blew up from an overtaxed boiler, which was too small to pull the huge schooner from the rocks. With pieces of machinery and woodwork, the crew and spectators who were aboard the little tug were blown into the air by the mighty blast.

Find Ancient Indian City

The existence of an ancient Indian city where the African negro settlement of La Labrada now stands, on the Pacific coastal plain of Guerrero, is reported by archeologists, Science Service says. In the official list of known pre-Spanish sites in Mexico, La Labrada has not been featured, although beautiful carved stones there have been known. According to local Mexican history, Indians of Guerrero towns on the coast frequently fled to the mountains when the negroes first came as slaves from Africa, because these blacks stole their women. The Indian remains of La Labrada may represent a black settlement on such an abandoned native site. The center of the ancient Indian city was apparently a long terrace. This rises on the southern outskirts of the negro village.

GIRLS AT CAMP CELIO MAKING NATURE STUDIES

Naming tents and making appropriate signs kept Camp Celio campers busy during their first days in camp. In Sugar Loaf, the camp group for junior girls, the names chosen express the keen interest shown in the surrounding wild life. Typical names are Junco West, Silver Tip, and Green Cone. The Harmony Ridge names follow the Forty Niners heritage of the Camp Celio site with such things as Ship Shape Shed. Another name in this camp group for intermediate girls is Knot Hole, because of the many knot holes in the tent floor and sign board.

The tree houses, built during Uncle Toby's visit to Camp Celio in the Gold Rush session, have also been christened. One is called Blue Heaven and the other, Uncle Toby, after Theodore A. Harper, National Camping chairman, who supervised the construction of the houses.

Trips to Rough and Ready, the new primitive camp, began the middle of the week. A group of ten from Harmony Ridge spends a whole day out of camp. Under the direction of Dorothy Beardsley, an experienced primitive camper, the girls cook supper, spend the night and return to camp in time for supper the next day. Thus they learn how to be comfortable out of camp and how to cook the three meals of the day. Miss Beardsley is also a graduate nurse.

At Bird's Eye, the center of nature activities, collections of characteristic animal life are being made. Snakes, frogs and pollwogs are kept alive in cages and aquariums. Butterflies and dragon flies are mounted. The camp favorities are Lady Guinevere, a coral king snake, and Lancelot, a young gopher snake. Craft work of the rustic sort also goes on at Bird's Eye. Several kinds of candle sticks, book ends, and pine needle baskets are being made.

Another project being carried out at Bird's Eye is the experimental feeding of five rats. The diets are arranged by Mildred Squier Camp dietition. One of the rats gets only flour and another just bread and butter. Miss Squier's pet rat, Skippy, is fed on an ideal diet and serves as an example of what correct feeding does to promote health and fine appearance.

In Kalo, camp of the senior girls, a kind of self-government is being tried out for the first time in Camp Celio. Three "sky pilots" have been elected. They are Louise McClure, chief sky pilot, Juliet Baxter and Catherine Newhall. The three form a council which guides the activity of Kalo, subject to the approval of the program director, Mildred Grain. Wednesday morning the first breakfast was cooked at the Hearth, Kalo's new outdoor fireplace. The special treat at this breakfast was strawberry jam made by Margaret Ratcliff, a camper, and brought to Camp Celio. Gladys Snyder, the camp director, was the guest of honor.

Part of each evening's program around the camp fires of Harmony Ridge and Sugar Loaf, is the reading of a story. Once a week in at the Sugar Loaf fire the Tom-Tom is opened. This Tom-Tom contains Indian symbols cut out of bright paper on which counselors have written the especially thoughtful things they have noted the girls doing. Only a selected number of the whole is read. As a reward for special achievement tent groups have the privilege of sleeping in the Indian Teepee. Harmony Ridge uses the tree houses for a similar purpose.

At the end of Gold Rush the customary closing banquet was given. The campers planned and carried out the program. Special decorations were on the tables and the campers all wore their Gold Rush bandanas. These bandanas were made by the girls, each having a border of individual design around a common central figure. Guests at the banquet were Eloise Ewing and Marian Weed, directors of Gold Hollow, the Girl Reserves camp, and Rhea Rupert, director of Camp Augusta, the Piedmont Camp Fire Girls camp. Both camps are on Lake Vera. After the banquet the Gold Rush Council Fire was held and the Gold Rush honors and counselor ties were presented.

Guests expected at Camp Celio on visitors' day, Sunday include Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Allen, Mr. and Mrs. B. Barthe, Nedra Bartlett, a member of the Oakland Camp Fire staff, John Berger, executive secretary of the Berkeley Y. M. C. A., Prof. W. B. Herms of the University of California, and Brooke Petray, executive secretary of the Berkeley Community Chest. A precautionary health measure no visitors under eighteen years of age are allowed in Camp Celio.

LAKE TAHOE IS VACATION IDEAL

BY A. B. GRAY

This is vacation time and everyone needs a vacation. It is not necessary to travel long distances and expend large sums of money. There are millions of people in the United States that would get the thrill of their lives if they could see Lake Tahoe, the most beautiful lake in the world. Lake Tahoe looks different this year, as you will have to admit when you see it. A vacation on the shores of the lake will benefit you should you even be in perfect health. To breathe the air at the Lake is like drinking fine old wine, and a bath in the cool waters will restore your vim, vigor and appetite. Fishing is good there and in the streams going to and from this wonderland.

All right, we have decided on a trip to Lake Tahoe. Now the question is, what route will we take. A new scenic route is the Tahoe-Ukiah highway from Colusa, Yuba City, Marysville through Smartsville, on to Rough and Ready, Grass Valley, Nevada City, Emigrant Gap, and Donner Lake to Lake Tahoe. Another new route is from Sacramento to Jackson and up to Silver Lake over Carson Pass to Hope Valley through Luther Pass to Meyers, and on to Lake Tahoe. Returning, one can travel the Pioneer Trail over the Echo Summit and down the South Fork of the American River through Placerville (Old Hangtown, or over the Victory highway U. S. 40, down through Colfax and Auburn. A trip over any of these routes will be well worth the time required and the money expended.

There are over fifty places around Lake Tahoe for as good a vacation as one could wish to take.

See Lake Tahoe first and then take notice of all that section surrounding our homes. All who live in this section are living in a recreational and vacation area. Take your vacation close to home this year.

HILLS OF CHEROKEE

BY JESSIE LILLIS DUKE

"You gave your life to save the flag,"
My Captain said to me;
And so I'll not becoming home
To the hills of Cherokee.
I feel the breath of Spring, my love;
Ah! how I'd like to see
Our native flowers unfold again,
On the hills of Cherokee.
But soon I'll leave my mortal form;
Ah then, with spirit free,
I'll wing my way to love and home,
In the hills of Cherokee.
To a darling girl awaiting me,
In the hills of Cherekee.

CAMPTONVILLE HAS LOTS OF BLACK WIDOWS

CAMPTONVILLE, June 2—Considerable comment has been made recently regarding the Black Widow spider. This spider is not a new thing in this section; although there seems to be more in numbers now than formerly. People have seen them, and killed them, but other than knowing it to be a spider, had no fear, nor paid any attention to them.

At present there are six of these spiders on display in the Meek Mercantile Company store, and anytime anyone would like a live one, it could be obtained in a very short time, for almost any old shed or secluded place under a house harbors one. These large shiny black spiders with the read triangle on them under part, have lived throughout this section for many years, but in as much as nothing was ever known about them, no one had fear of them.

Although they are perhaps more poisonous than a rattlesnake, they do not create the excitement that the discovery of a snake does.

Records show that there have been many people bitten by this spider throughout the state, and of the total number 25 per cent have died. It has been discovered that the blood of a person who recovers after having been bitten can be used as a serum for a victim, and this blood injection saves the victim's life.

It is said that the name "Black Widow" comes from the fact that the spiders we see are females, that in the early stage of their life they kill the males, hence the name.

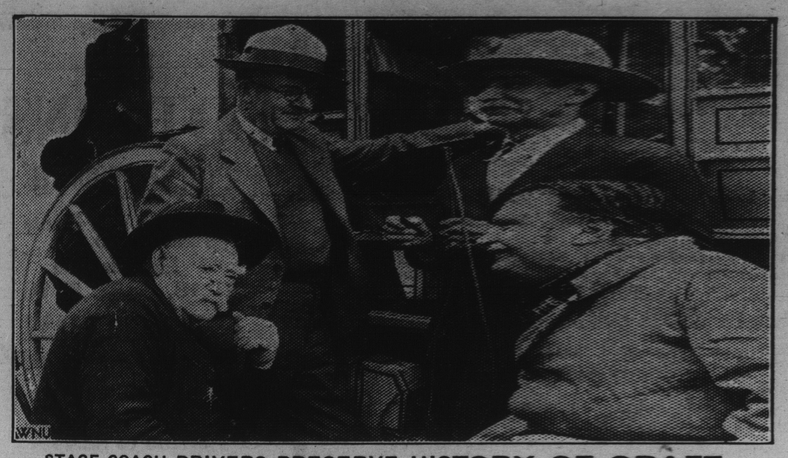
HISTORICAL CALIFORNIA



STAGE COACH DRIVERS PRESERVE HISTORY OF CRAFT

(By WNU Service)

With scores of old-time stage coach drivers answering the call for the first reunion of the "profession" on record in the West, members of the temporary organizing committee at Carpinteria, California, have established headquarters in an old Concord stage. The visiting drivers held meetings there June 23-24. The committee members, each of whom has cracked a whip over a mail or passenger stage on a regular run, seek to form a permanent organization of surviving stage coach drivers, which will preserve the history of the craft, and compile a lexicon of the colorful terminology and customs, most of which were sent into oblivion with the advent of the railroads.

Stream and Trail

(By WNU Service)

Officials of the state fish and game commission have been examining coyote's stomachs to see where the game birds have been going in all parts of the state during the last few years. Hunters slashed open 563 coyotes and found only two quail. One hundred had deer meat in them.

Commission experts account for the large number of stomachs containing deer meat by pointing out that the greater portion were taken in the hunting season, when wounded deer get away from hunters and when hunters throw away legs and other parts of their kill.

The survey shows that rabbits, ground squirrels and wood rats are staple food items. Sheep also are an important part of the little wolves' diet.

Of 324 bobcat stomachs examined, only five had quail remains. A total of 152 fox stomachs were examined and only two had quail meat.

Harold McNeal of Fort Bragg, while fishing for salmon hooked a 195 pound porpoise and had to cut his line even after shooting it. He followed the sea giant and later succeeded in killing it.

A new type of trout has been discovered in Fish Valley, near Sacramento, and game officials are planning to make it a closed area to preserve this new finny tribe. It is called the Piute trout and is said to be the result of long isolation in Fish valley. It has a distinctive shape and is highly gilded—the most beautiful variation of any trout.

Bass fishing has gone to pot in the Sacramento area, but trout fishing is another story. Reports from Gold Lake, above Sierra City, tell of limits of 14-inch fish taken on the "garden hackle" (worm to those who use them) and on flies during the early morning and late evening.

Reports from San Diego and San Bernardino counties are that bass planted in Big Bear, Arrowhead, and other localities have practically eliminated the trout fry planted there.

A plan to improve fishing conditions in the upper Klamath river through adoption of a clearing program similar to that instituted in the upper reaches of the Eel river some seasons ago is being arranged by the state chamber of commerce. An effort will be made to regulate the flow, possibly through construction of coffer dams.

An unusually successful fishing season is being enjoyed by southern California anglers. A good many streams seem to have given up their share of fish but there are still plenty of places for fishermen to get results for their efforts. The lakes in the San Diego district have lived up to all expectations and catches from those waters have by far exceeded previous seasons. With the bass season in full swing, Barret reservoir has bested the other lakes by giving up almost one-third more fish per angler.

All lakes have averaged better than four fish per man, the weight varying from four to nine pounds per fish.

News Oddities

(By WNU Service)

Ontario—Nancy Brigben, 17, walked up and received her high school diploma here recently and then collapsed from an attack of infantile paralysis. As a consequence 242 members of the graduating class were quarantined in their homes for two weeks by the city health officer's orders.

Healdsburg—A three-foot gopher snake was taken from a nest of swallows on top of the barn of the McDonald ranch here recently. The snake was killed and cut open and the bodies of six baby swallows were discovered.

Roseville—Pete Clement of Jefferson street had a narrow escape from serious injury while taking his dog to a veterinarian for medical treatment. The dog had a fit and jumped on his master's lap, causing a collision between the car and a telephone pole.

San Diego—Vaccination of dogs by health department officials has come to a temporary standstill while veterinarians recovered from bites they received while inoculating a number of specimens recently. One doctor was inoculated by a dog who jumped and caused the doctor to insert the syringe in his own hand.

Pasadena—For the 27th time since November, 1929, when the accident happened, Motorcycle Officer Paul L. Goble was in a hospital recently because still another bit of glass imbedded in his person on that occasion had worked its way to the surface. At the time of the accident a motorcycle headlight bulb smashed and tiny slivers of glass were liberally distributed about the officer's exposed parts.

Mining & Oil

(By WNU Service)

If things proceed along in orderly fashion, which is uncommon with price experiments, the California oil industry is headed for a profitable six months as the result of Federal approval of the new refining and marketing plan. Already marketers are talking of further price increases, as soon as the legal preliminaries are concluded and the operating machinery is set up.

It remains to be seen if the new agreement will be employed as a lever to widen justifiably the spread between retail gasoline prices and consumer income. Usually the oil industry has been guilty of this offense with its price experiments, and invariably has paid the penalty through the appearance of price cut volume to meet the demand.

At the present time, however, price cutting can be prosecuted by the federal government.

About 38 refiners in the state are listed as signers of the pact. The refiners of California manufacture about 185,000,000 to 195,000,000 gallons of gasoline monthly for sale in the Pacific Coast states at this time of the year. The California market consumes about two-thirds of the production.

From the Burton Brothers' recent discovery on Soledad Hill, Mojave area, ore averaging $40 a ton is being brought up.

The mill of the Lava Cap Gold Mining corporation is treating 100 tons of ore daily, with the production coming from the Banner and Central properties in the Nevada City district.

With the upward extension of the new ore body located by drifting from the 2,000-foot level, the Central Eureka company is arranging to sink the old Eureka shaft another 60 feet and drive from the 2500-foot level to seek the downward continuation of the ledge near Jackson.

Long Voyages Made by Derelicts of the Sea

The recent sighting of the "ghost ship" Baychimo near Point Barrow, after she had been lost to the sight of men for a year and a half, calls to mind one of the sea's most captivating mysteries, though a dread menace to every sailor—the derelict, writes Louis H. Bolander in the Baltimore Sun.

The Baychimo is, or was, a Hudson Bay steamship loaded with a $600,000 fur cargo. In September, 1931, she was trapped in the ice off Wainright. The following month airplanes from Nome rescued the passengers, crew and part of the cargo. On Christmas day a heavy storm broke. The next day she disappeared, but a few days later was sighted by Eskimos. On their report a trapper visited the ship and removed $35,000 worth of furs. Again she disappeared, but was seen again by Eskimos in April, 1932. Since then, so far as the writer knows, no human eye has ever sighted the sturdy steamship, clutched in the remorseless Arctic ice.

There is something fascinating, something compelling in the thought of these lonely, broken, shabby sea hoboes drifting over the seven seas at the mercy of wind, tide and current. Though a menace to sober shipping there still clings to them an atmosphere of romance.

One of the most famous derelicts known to seafaring men was the schooner B. R. Woodside. She was forsaken by officers and men some hundreds of miles east of Savannah. At once she headed straight for Europe, but when she neared the Canaries, veered about twenty miles of her starting point. She then meandered slowly down the coast of Florida and then went zigzagging again across the Atlantic. During her career as a derelict she was sighted by no fewer than forty captains of ships in all parts of the Atlantic. Each one, of course, reported her then whereabouts to the hydrographic office in Washington. At last she was picked up and towed to Abaco, New Providence.

Still another famous derelict was the Fannie E. Woolston. For three and one-half years she wandered over the Atlantic, covering a distance estimated at 10,000 miles. During her journeyings she visited the coast of England, and then sojourned impartially along the coast of France, Spain and Portugal. She drifted down to the equator and back to America, where she was wrecked 3 degrees north of the spot from which she began her career as a hobo of the seas. This is not surprising when we find that it is not uncommon for a derelict to drift as much as 70 miles in 24 hours.

Old Canadian Town

The oldest white settlement in Canada, Tadoussac, Quebec, this year is celebrating with the rest of the province the four hundredth anniversary of the landing of Jasques Cartier.

It was at Tadoussac that Cartier wintered during one of his voyages to Canada, and Tadoussac was one of the important centers in the early history of French Canada. Long before Cartier's time, according to tradition, Tadoussac was visited by ancient Iberians and later by the Vikings.

Foxy Idea

"Why do you prefer players who have happy homes?" the manager of the baseball team was asked.

"Because," he replied, "the big thing in baseball is getting home, and if a fellow thinks a lot of home he'll be more anxious to get there than one who doesn't."

Splendor of Yosemite Almost Beyond Words

Yosemite valley, magnificent as it is, should not be the only spot visited in Yosemite park. The park itself is as big as Rhode Island and every foot of it is thrilling.

The Grand canyon of the Tuolumne rising to Hetch-Hetchy valley is as awesome in its own way. Here the river roars down, exploding in a series of cascades and rapids, and every once in a while it hits a granite rock and shoots up in great waterwheels—circles of water rising 40 or 50 feet in the air. One can easily give credence here to tales of water demons and river sprites.

Here, too, is the great Wawona tree with the road cut through it, which has been reproduced on thousands of post cards. This road, incidentally, was cut before this became a national park. The government conservation authorities permit no such fooling with their treasures now.

From the high Sierras, Yosemite rambles down through all the timber varieties to the warm luxuriance of Mariposa grove. Everyone has seen pictures of sequoias but no one can realize them until he stands at the foot of one and nearly falls over backward trying to see the top.

Where other giant trees end the sequoia begins to send out its first feathery foliage, and then it really starts climbing. The Mariposa grove includes the huge Grizzly giant, which is about 3,000 years old, but there are vast trees all around it.

THE NEW FIRESTONE HIGH SPEED TIRE FOR 1934

Greatest Tire Firestone Has Ever Made

WORLD RECORD BROKEN

It is almost inconceivable that human ingenuity could build tires that would withstand the terrific punishment of the 500-mile grind at Indianapolis, May 30.

'Round and 'round the blistering track they streaked, hour after hour, under the blazing sun . . . the low moan of powerful motors rose to a terrific roar as they hit the straightaways at 150 miles or better—grinding, pulling, pounding around treacherous tire-destroying curves faster than they ever dared before. Sliding into the turns at these terrific speeds, there was nothing to hold the car to the track except the tire.

Mile after mile, lap after lap, greater and greater heat and increased centrifugal force developed to separate the tread from the body of the tire. Every conceivable force known was working to tear the tires to pieces—yet Firestone High Speed Tires, with Gum-Dipped High Stretch Cords, withstood this most gruelling test.

Thirty-three demons of speed—thirty-three cars equipped with Firestone High Speed Tires—all protected by Gum-Dipped High Stretch Cords—entered the Annual Speed Classic. Every tire was bought by the driver or owner of the car.

In all the heat—in all the grinding—in all the straining and pulling—not one cotton strand loosened—not one life was endangered by tire failure—not one car was forced out of the race by tire trouble. Six of the winners finished without a tire change. What a tribute to the Extra Strength—Safety and Durability built into Firestone High Speed Tires.

WHAT THIS MEANS TO YOU

The amazing record of Firestone dependability at Indianapolis was made possible by the Firestone patented process of Gum-Dipping. Every fibre of every cord in every ply of the tire is saturated and coated with pure liquid rubber; there are eight extra pounds of rubber to every 100 pounds of cotton cords.

There is greater adhesion between the plies of the Gum-Dipped Cord body and between the body and the tread. As a result of this patented process of Gum-Dipping Firestone engineers have been able to build a wider tread of flatter contour, with more and tougher rubber and deeper non-skid, giving you more than 50% longer non-skid mileage.
